

Hi, I'm Carolyn Diaz, a dedicated mother of three and a former substitute teacher at Galileo. My journey led me to embrace my roles as both a parent and an event coordinator, which eventually inspired me to become a behavioral technician. Working with students one-on-one, I found my true passion in helping them grow and succeed.

During my two years at Galileo, I witnessed the power of education and its positive impact on young minds, which fueled my commitment to the school's mission. Not only did my son attend the middle school program, but my oldest son also taught at Galileo middle school for five years, making it a truly special place for my family.

When I'm not working or spending time with my children, I'm fueled by my love for travel. Exploring new cultures and places invigorates my spirit and broadens my perspective.

I believe that every individual has unique potential, and I'm thrilled to be part of the team that helps students unlock their brilliance. Making a difference in their lives fills me with immense joy and satisfaction.
